TUESDAY, JULY 10, 1866.

One of the very ablest and most distinguished Democrats of the country, one who for years has gone as far in favor of the South as he could go loyally, and who has even been charged a thousand times with downright dislovalty, expressed his conviction very lately that the election of Judge Duvall would add much to the radical strength in the North and the West and the Northwest. Naturally, inevitably, and necessarily, such would be the effect. The whole loyal people of the country. understanding, as they distinctly do, that Judge D. and his party are pro-secession ists and pro-rebels, would receive the resalt as proof that Kentneky is a pro-rebel State. And they would ask each other and ask themselves what the condition of the eleven Sonthern States lately in open rebellion must be when even Kentucky. which has claimed the palm of patriotism. throws herself on the side of the friends of the rebellion. The Radical strength everywhere would be reinforced immense lv. Our State would be regarded as throwing down her ganntlet at the feet of the leval portion of the nation; and the loyal portion of the nation are in no mood to brook defiance. The radicals, strengthened by the accession of many who would gladly maintain the soundest conservatism, could hardly fail to establish the su premacy of their power. The triumph would be theirs, and it would undoubtedly be complete. Thus the Duvall party is working into the hands of the radicals far more effectually than the radicals could

It is probably in children. The trail of the serpent is over vain that we call upon them to mark and them all. The secret of their enmity to heed these truths, but we must do our the American Union is their hatred of republican institutions and their love of The editor of the Conrier approves despotism. But we ask our respected neighbor whether he is quite snre or even believes that he himself, if elected to the Convention, has the necessary qualifications for acting as a member of it. The call, under which the Convention is to meet and act, says: "The Union of the States is in every case indissoluble and is perpetual." • • "There is no right anywhere to dissolve the Union or to separate States from the Union." Now our neighbor, if we understand him, cannot indorse these declarations without stultifying himself and putting his conscience to a torture almost as bad as that of the wheel and the rack. He doesn t think that the Union of the States is in every case indissoluble, and is perpetual -he holds the exact contrary. He doesn't believe that there is no He says: "It cannot be denied that the right anywhere to dissolve the Union or to separate States from the Uni teaches the direct opposite. He contends that secession and rebellion were right. He treats the result of the late conflict as the crushing of right beneath the linge and bloody foot of might. He neither retracts nor modifies one word that he said when Le was urging secession before it occurred, or one word that he uttered while the mighty conflict was in progress. What he attered then, he thinks still. Hence we ask again, can he, if appointed a delegate to the Convention he recommends, get the consent of that friend or enemy of his (we know not which) his conscience, to accept the appointment and perform its

And we call the attention of the Conrier to the following paragraph of the call: But no delegate will take a seat in such Convention who does not loyally accept the national situation, and cordially indose the principles above set forth, and who is not attached in true allegiance to the Constitution, the Union, and the Government of the United States.

The editor knows best whether he "cordially indorses" the principles set forth in the call. Our nnderstanding is that he doesn't indorse them at all; certainly not "cordially." He can feel no possible cordially." He can feel no possible cordially is the will be with strong mental reservations and nnder durces. He must be speaking and acting under the cruel stress of circumstance. We don't think that he will go to Philadelphia We don't believe that he will be expected. DAHLONEGA, LUMPKIN COUNTY, GA., July 2, 1866. July 2, 1866. ∫
The debate with inyself whether I should to to Athens, the seat of learning, and witness the commencement ceremonies at the University of Georgia, or go to Macon, lledgeville and Angusta to feel the n kin county, came to an end on Saturda last by my accepting the offer of a gold worshiping fellow-traveler to proceed from is one of the most important measures and there charter a buggy to convey us this place, where the gold fever rages a present with very marked virulence. Tal stand for an office. We know how ing the road through Canton, Cherokee county, (the former residence of ex-Gov. Joseph E. Brown,) we reached here on Sunday evening, and have since been regarded as the knowing avent-courriers of some Yaukee company coming to buy or lease gold lands.

While the members of established companies look npon us distrustfully, watching our movements, and artfully sounding our movements, who will enhance prices, andmany a story of the richness of certain spots have we acribbler talks about a party's ocenpying who will enhance prices, and many a story of the richness of certain spots have we heard from those benevolent men who, though owning them, are willing to convey the treasure to us from which untold millions may be reached, only reserving for themselves a few thousands of soiled greenbacks. My efforts to disclaim any intention to dig or wash have been fruitless, and have only fixed the conviction that I am a remarkably knowing one, to be cultivated by lot owners and carefully watched by miners.

There are two companies here, the one at work at the Wood mine, under the management of Mr. A. Dexter, and the other, a Washington city company, under the going on, General Hobson is as dumb as an cyster and silent as a catfish." He voiceless as a stone. Who writes such one aprontull of dirt, which she grabbled with her hands.

The Hannay company are endeavoring to lease the lands on both sides of the Chestatee river and Cain creek, engaging to give the owners one-tenth of the gross produce, and purpose, if they can secure control of the lands, to finme and work out the bed of the river, for several miles, by means of powerful machinery and miles on miles of large fron tubes, which are now hauled hither from Athens every day. Mr. Hannay is an experienced miner, having learned the business in California. He is apparently confident of large success, and he seems to have favorably impressed the people about here, as he has already received promises of support from many of the land owners.

There are any quantity of adventurons individuals mining on their own account, whose only machinery is a pick, a shovel, and a couple of tin pans. These shovel, and a couple of tin pans. These men and women (for the fair sex is well represented) squat on any land they think "goldy," and whether the owners object or not, dig and shovel and work away until the majesty of the law is invoked to teach them a more accurate view of the rights of property. Already are the tables of the money-changers spread in this little town, and flocking to them may be seen the owners of little bags of the "vile dross" which are bought and weighed and paid for at the rate of a dollar for a penny-amount of gold which has been found, as many of the finders are interested in concealing their good fortune to avoid accounting to the absent owners of the soil on which they made the haul. But large sums have certainly been picked up, and little doubt is felt that experienced men with machinery and capital may work these mines with considerable profit.

The Rutherford property is not yet soil. GIFT CONCERT

The Rutherford property is not yet sold or leased. It is supposed to be the richest of all, and great exertions are being made to secure it. The owners are still obdurate, and in their absence adventurous rate, and in their assence adventurous experimenters are gathering up. I was told, very confortable little sums in gold dust, which they make over discreetly to the accommodating brokers who live here and at Auraria. Two individuals who are industriously engaged on this property have resisted all attempts to persuade them to quit, and claim the right of discovery as to the treasure while they lay overy as to the treasure, while they lay

The local dignitaries, and indeed the in-habitants generally are in the wildest ex-citement. No one doubts Hanny's scheme. All believe their fortune made, and every PRICE OF TICKETS, $1.00 EACH. All believe their fortune made, and every property owner is under the impression that a Mariposa is at this moment lying a few inches below the surface of his lot. The Chestatee and Cain Creek are alive with gold fishers, splashing and puddling, and scraping, and grabhling wherever a "likely place" presents itself. I intend to make an examination for myself before I leave, as it is by no means safe to believe even a fractional part of the tales which are told at any hour of the day or night around the bar of the rather homely hostlery, where strangers are taken in and lery, where strangers are taken in and

Whether the hopes of the companies are realized or not, the people in these parts will be greatly benefitted by the excitement. It brings money and employment, and no where were they more sorely needed than in this poor mountain district. Politics are as much ignored as is the ourt scandal of the Shah of Persia. It Brownlow were to become an honest, God-fearing man, Sumner emigrate to Cube and buy a "plantation and uegroes," and tevens, abandoning miscegenation and enstitutional amendments, become a "decent white man," the news would hardly create a passing remark here. Pennyweights, lots, holes, Hannay, flumes, Rutherford and GOLD are the only subjects of conversation, speculation and centemplation. The climate is delightful, the water charmingly cool, and the whisky infamous.

The Austrians, however, who were insisted in great force at Verona, sallied forth from the place at daybreak, and, anticipating the lialini novement, took up their position upon those hills which are now everywhere bristling with bestions and reducts, and may be looked up in as mere outworks of the two citalels extending from the gates of one to those of the other. After a reverse and bloody, or as the italians describe it, desperate integrite, which bested mearly the whole day, that longest of summer days, the Imperial army was victorious along the whole line. They stormed the summit where the Italians held out the lorgest, and at the close of the ingagement, as I at the close of the ingagement, as I P. Barbarous Mode of Execution. A correspondent of the Bombay Ga tte, writing from Baroda, on the 19th o

The salient incident of the week has been the execution for treason, of a subject of the Guic war. The punishment of dragging to death at the foot of an elephant was the one adopted. The matter has created a great sensation here, for the victim, though a Mussulman, was a man of much influence and standing. The cerime is alleged to have been, attempting the life of the Blow Sahib—that is, the Commander-in-Chief of Gnicowar's forces; this offense is reckoued as treason. The author deduces, in refer mess t

The anthor deduces, in references to noses, the argument that, as "the form of our noses depends upon the style of our characters, if we desire to improve the fermer we must cultivate the latter. But we dismiss nesses and turn at the consideration of our eyes, with which we are better acquainted:

"Large eyes have always been admired, especially to women, and may be considered essential to the highest order of beauty, in almost every description of which, from Helen of Troy to Lola Montes, they hold a prominent place. We read of 'large spiritual eyes,'

"And eyes leving large,' and of 'little, sparkling, heady eyes,' to

"And eyes loving large," and of 'little, sparkling, heady eyes,' to which the epithets 'spiritual' and 'loving, are never applied.

"An Arab expresses his idea of the "An Arab expresses his idea of the beauty of a woman by saying that sho has the eye of a gazelle. This is the hurder of his song. The timidity, gentleness and innocent fear in the eye of the deer tribe are compared with the modesty of the young girl: Let her be as the loving hind and the pleasant roe."

Dr. Redheld observes that person man-large eyes have very lively emotions, think very rapidly and speak fast, unless there be a predominance of the phleg-matic temperament. Of persons with small eyes the reverse is true. The for r are quick and spontaneous in the feelings and in the expression of them, and are therefore simple, like the Scotch Swiss, and all who inhabit mountainous regions. The latter are slow and calenlating, and therefore artiful, like the Gyp regions. The latter are slow and calculating, and therefore artful, like the Gypsies, a people who generally inhabit level countries.

In reference to the meaning of the color of eyes, we are told "black-eyed women are apt to be pussionate and jealous; blue-eyed, soulful, truthful, affectionate, und confiding; gray-eyed, literary, philosophical, resolute, and cold; hazel-eyed, hazy in temper and inconstant in feeling. And green-eyes—what can be said of them? I have seen some like eats' eyes, yet the majority are very handsome. I have met seen floating in a lambent light—large, dreamy, pensive, and yet really green, though they were such as the soul of Keats, and especially of Coleridge, might have looked out of. They are not bewildering like the blue, nor dangerous like the black, neither affectionate as the brown, nor passionate as the gray; but they are the eyes for a visionary poet, whose soul has little to do with carth, and loves the land of memery and imagination better, they would have done for Mrs. Browning, and I can tancy them, to go very far back, in I can fancy them, to go very far back, in Psyche's face.

Jared Ingersoll, of Philadelphia, has pleaded guilty of purloining books from the Mercantile Library of that city. He further admitted that he had robbed other libraries. The books taken were sold for waste paper. The librarian, who detected him putting books under his cont, testifies that during the last seven years over ten thousand dollars' werth of books had been lost in this manner.
